ENGLISH TAUGHT PROGRAMS

英文授课项目

● International Relations

Contemporary China Studies (CCS) is a two-year international master program specifically designed for overseas students having an interest in deepening their knowledge about China's politics, economics, and diplomacy. Designed to introduce students to China's domestic and international politics, the program will provide its graduates with the theoretical toolkit, practical knowledge, and analytical capacity that they need to succeed in a globalized world.

● International Graduate Program in Politics

The Department of Politics at East China Normal University accepts applications from prospective students interested in pursuing a 2-year research-oriented Master of Law or 4-year Ph.D. in Politics. The program is based on ECNU's main campus in Shanghai. Part-time, non-degree students are also welcome to apply for short-term studies leading to a graduate certificate or to complement studies elsewhere. The program focus is Chinese politics, and draws from the Department's expertise in the areas of political philosophy, political history, political theory and systems, political communication and public relations, political education and participation, international relations, and research methods. Mandarin language learning support will be provided, and degree-seekers will be required to pass the HSK Level 3 Examination in order to graduate.

● Anthropology

The MA in Anthropology at ECNU is a 3-year degree programme taught by highly qualified faculty in both English and Chinese who have been trained overseas as well as in China. A major component of training is a 6-month period of fieldwork in the second year, on the basis of which a thesis is written up under careful guidance from a supervisor. Our expertise covers visual anthropology and the making of fieldwork-based films, the anthropology of development and development issues, and socio-cultural relations with the environment, ranging from urban to rural situations and covering minority and majority populations.

● Statistics

The statistics program currently has 41 full-time faculty members consisting of 21 full professors, 17 associate professors, 3 assistant professors, among whom four are 'state professors'. More than half of the faculty members have either earned their degrees from prestigious universities in the west or have had tremendous exposure to western curriculum via post-docs research or visiting positions. In addition, the program has two distinguished part-time faculty affiliates from Hong Kong University and Oxford University. Most faculty members are engaged in cutting-edge research in the areas of industry, finance, medical science funded by competitive nationwide as well as provincial grant programs.
